

August 2011

Welcome to the new City of Pullman website! All of us here hope that you find this new site cleaner, more attractive, and easier to navigate and use.

With the new website, we have some new features we'd like to draw your attention to, including:

- Easier navigation! As you navigate the site, below the menus you'll see a line of "breadcrumbs" that tell you where you are, and provide links back to parent pages. And you can always get back to this front page by clicking the City of Pullman logo in the upper-left corner.
- An improved and searchable City Code page, hosted by the Municipal Research and Services Center of Washington (<http://www.mrsc.org>)
- An improved search for the City of Pullman website - you can find it in the top right of every page.
- A translation widget at the top of the page, to help you read our content in your native language. (Translations provided by Google Translate)
- The new City Council Video Archive, where you can watch streaming video of recent City Council meetings on demand.

We've worked hard to make this new website as easy to use as possible, to help you find the most up-to-date information on your City government, but as with anything brand new, there's likely to be a few kinks we didn't manage to work out. If you experience any technical difficulties (broken links, error messages, etc.) with the new site, please contact the Webmaster. If you have questions about the site, or can't find what you're looking for, please contact City Administration.
