Pending Land Use Applications 3

The Pullman-Moscow Regional Airport is a critical component of the community's economy. It provides passenger and cargo service on a daily basis. It also serves as an integral part of local business operations by providing a transportation base for company jets, aerial application planes, and other commercial aircraft.

In order to facilitate the safe use of local airports such as this, the Federal Aviation Administration maintains regulations that limit the height of objects on and around airport properties. These provisions, which are enforced by local governments, establish theoretical surfaces that cannot be penetrated by structures or vegetation. (Some of these surfaces are depicted in the graphic below.) The regulations allow municipalities the opportunity to identify potential aeronautical hazards in advance to prevent adverse impacts on airport operations. Both Pullman and Whitman County administer standards based on these federal requirements.

In addition to the laws mentioned above, Pullman has established an "Airport Use Restriction Overlay District" which encompasses the airport and its environs. Within this district, certain land uses, such as housing, child care centers, educational facilities, hospitals, and churches, are prohibited. These types of land uses are considered to be incompatible with airport operations because they would be significantly affected by the high levels of noise generated by aircraft.

county's jurisdiction near the airport raised awareness for city and county personnel that the two agencies go about protecting the airport in somewhat different fashion. For instance, although the entities have the same basic height limitation rules, there are differences in code language and staff interpretation of that wording. Also, the county does not administer an airport use restriction overlay district. To address these discrepancies, city staff, county officials, and airport management have initiated discussions. The goal of these meetings is to devise the means for seamless regulation of land use activity between the city and county in the vicinity of the airport. Through this effort, both governmental agencies are working to protect the viability of this important community asset.

UPDATE ON DOWNTOWN PARKING DISCUSSIONS

In last month's newsletter, we reported that the Planning Commission had reached consensus at its November meeting on four recommendations pertaining to the subject of downtown parking. These four recommendations promoted enhanced enforcement of parking regulations, better identification of parking opportunities downtown, exploration of a parking permit system for downtown residents, and establishment of design standards if an off-street parking regulation is imposed for residential uses in the central business district.

On December 4, the City Council conducted a discussion regarding the Planning Commission's recommendations. At that time, several Council members expressed their agreement with the suggestion for better enforcement. Other members encouraged city officials to examine a variety of alternatives for providing more parking opportunities downtown with the help of entities such as Washington State University and the Chamber of Commerce.

At the conclusion of its discussion, the Council stated its interest in obtaining more definitive recommendations from the Planning Commission on this topic, including an assessment of the need for an off-street parking requirement for downtown residential uses. In order to act on this matter in a timely fashion, the Council requested these recommendations from the Commission by March of next year.
